

This log sheet was designed to fit inside a 35mm film or similar container. Here are the instructions for printing and assembling the log:

1. Print page two (the instruction page) one time.
2. Print page three (the log page) on the back of the previously printed page two.
3. Print page three two more times.
4. Print page three on the back of the previously printed page three. You should now have four pages. One with the instructions and cache name page with the log page printed on the back and two pages with the log page on the front and back. If you don't need the extra room for a short pencil or small trade items, you can add more pages.
5. Run a strip of two-sided tape along the top of one of a log sheet just within the top gray printed line. Run this all the way across the page. Align a log sheet with the top of the page and press it in place adhering it to the tape. Repeat this with all the other log sheets. Lastly, repeat this process with the instruction sheet. If you don't have two-sided tape, you can use a small bead of white glue. Note: The glue method will require drying time.
6. Using a metal ruler or other straight edge and cut along the gray lines with a razor knife. Do this on all for sides and vertical lines separating each log. You can use scissors, but the resulting cut will not be as clean. WARNING: USE CAUTION WHEN CUTTING WITH A RAZOR KNIFE. MAKE SURE YOUR FINGERS ARE COMPLETELY OUT OF THE CUTTING AREA BEFORE MAKING THE CUT.

You can now roll the log and insert in the container. Depending on the thickness of the paper you use, you may have to use fewer total pages.

TIP: If you use an ink jet printer, the ink may run if the log gets damp. Using a laser printer will create a log that will not run if it gets damp.
